A Swamp Mystery.

The summer of the year 1862 was particularly hot on the coast of North Carolina; it even did something to counteract the more destructive heat of the civil war. General Burnside had captured a long reach of the seaboard and had established his headquarters at Newbern. No battles followed very soon, nor any storms to speak of, but the army and the weather were fast getting into a high state of preparation for either kind of event.

There were Union troops at Fort Macon and Morehead City, not many miles up the coast from Newbern, and much pay was due them. The money came down from the North in July, and a couple of paymasters received orders to go at once and deal it out to the men.

Before the war a railway had been constructed from Newbern to More-head City. Its rails were still there, but all its rolling stock, with the exception of one hand-car, had gone into the interior of the state. The viaduct was just wide enough to carry the rails, and much of its course was through a swamp whose dense bushes were now luxuriantly reaching out, as if they meant to capture the track before the end of the season.

The quartermaster placed his one hand-car at the disposal of the paymas-ters. He did so with the pleasant information that on the previous even-ing the busy confederates had made a raid and had swept away all the pickets posted along the line of the railway. New pickets had been posted, he told them, and their proposed trip would be reasonably safe. "That is," he said, "I guess you're safe from any confedcrates, but if you don't get through be-fore dark I'd advise you to be pretty prompt about answering any hail. The boys'll all be awake this time. They won't be slow about taking care of themselves in the dark. Not a man of 'em wants to go to Wilmington just now, uor to Andersonville, either." That warning made the paymaster shake his head and grow in importance before the hand-car set out, for it was plain enough that it would be dark before the trip could be half made. Precisely how dark it would be, or why, was not as yet imagined by anybody.

There were nine men huddled on that hand-car when it went. A sergeant and four soldiers were its motive power, guard and garrison. The writer of this story was there altogether as an adventurer. Two paymasters, with the rank of major, and one clerk, were in charge of a black box containing over $80,000 in greenbacks, to be scattered among the volunteers on the morrow.

The air grew more and more clear and sultry, and just before night a sort of haze began to rise over the eastern

"That's it, major," said the sergeant to one of the paymasters. "We're going to hear from Cape Hat-

"Storm coming?"
"Right along. It won't take it long to come.'

He was correct as to the time required by Cape Hatteras, or whatever was managing that storm. The sky rapidly grew black as ink and darkness came with but moderate reference to the departing sun. Just before entering the denser thickets of the swamp a picket was reached, and the officer in charge repeated the warning of the quartermaster.

"Be ready to answer right away. It'll be pitch dark, and some of the boys are nervous after last night's work. They'll shoot quick." That was to the sergeant, but it was a paymaster who replied:

"Well, now, captain, we didn't say so, but we thought the trip would be safer by night than by day. The men have got to have the money."

"Hope the rebs won't get it, then. Put her through, sergeant, but look sharp; the storm's most got here." In ten minutes more such a storm had arrived as was a credit to Cape Hatteras and the whole seacoast of North Caro-lina. On rolled the hand-car, its crouching passengers drenched with rain that fell in streams rather than drops. The lightning flashed almost incessantly, and the thunder seemed to be rolling around all over the swamp. Except where a streak of lightning cleft it, the darkness was like a solid wall, and there was neither head-light nor hand-lantern provided for that hand-car.

"Worst storm I eversaw," remarked the sergeant, and one of the brace of men who were acting as motive power grunted back at him: "It's the worst kind of storm; but you can't see it."

It was a just correction of the statement made by the sergeant, but at that moment a hoarse, deep, all sepulchral voice from among the bushes and darkness at the right of the track com-

"Halt!" "Stop her! Quick, boys!" exclaimed the sergeant, and as the men changed instantly from motive power to brakes he sprang from the car into water above his knees and waded forward to answer the hail and give the countersign. It was all in vain. Down came a double deluge of rain and thicker darkness. Then a vividness of blue electricity danced through the dripping bushes, and a great roar of thunder fol-lowed it, as if in search of a hidden "picket." Neither rain nor lightning nor thunder nor the anxious question-ings of the sergeant discovered him. There he was, or must have been, dead or alive, for he had said "halt," and that was apparently all he had to say.

The sergeant splashed his way back to the hand-car and it was decided to go forward.

"We're just as likely to be fired on first thing," remarked the paymaster's clerk, "and they'd hit some of us, sure!" Both of the paymasters agreed with him and one expressed his satisfaction that the box containing the greenbacks was waterproof.

"That's more than I am," said one "That's more than I am," said one of the soldiers. "This 'er rain's got through my roof. I can feel it trickle down inside of me,"

The hand-car was not propelled rapidly after that, but the lightning and thunder worked harder than ever. Per-MARE FOURTH COLUMN.]

wonderfully relieved by this medicine.

"I have used Ayer's Cherry Pectoral with the best effect in my practice. This wonderful preparation once saved my life. I had a constant cough, night sweats, was greatly reduced in flesh, and given up by my physician. One bottle and a half of the Pectoral cured me."—A. J. Eidson, M. D., Middleton, Tennessee.

"Several years ago I was severely ill. The doctors said I was in consumption, and that they could do nothing for me, but advised me, as a last resort, to try Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. After taking this medicine two or three months I was cured, and my health remains good to the present day."—James Birchard, Darien, Conn.

"Several years ago, on a passage home from California, by water, I contracted so severe a cold that for some days I was confined to my state-room, and a physician on board considered my life in danger. Happening to have a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, I used it freely, and my lungs were soon restored to a healthy condition. Since then I have invariably recommended this preparation."—J. B. HE WAS NEAR THE BRINK.

The Graphic Account of a Most Wonderful Occurrence which Took Place in Kingston, N. Y.

(Special Correspondence Boston Paper.) An event has taken place in this city so re markable in its nature, that I venture to describe it in full. The principal in the affair is Mr. Jere Smith, son of Cornelius B. Smith, of the State Insurance Department at Albany, who is well known, stands very high, and is in every way reliable. I have had a long and most interesting interview with him, which I transcribe and send you in his own words, trusting it may prove valuable to your readers:

interesting interview with him, which I transcribe and send you in his own words, trusting it may prove valuable to your readers:

"During last year," he said, "I could not understand what was the trouble with me, I I had always felt strong and hearty, but I gradually became aware that something was undermining me. I first began to feel droway, and then in a day or two I would be unnaturally wide a w a k c. Strange paths would oome in different parts of my body. My head did not ache much but it usually felt heavy. I was sometimes I hated food, while my sleep was very irregular. I could have been so blind, but I suppose I was like most people who are troubled in the same way, and thought it nothing dangerous. After awhile I noticed a peculiar color and odor about the fluids I was passing; that they were dark at times and very light at others. Finally I began to gain flesh, but I knew that it was unnatural and that I was bloating. This frightened me and I consulted physicams, who were very kind in their attentions, but did not help me in the least. My father then went with me to New York, and we consulted the emisent Dr. Koyes, who treated me for several weeks. At that time my condition was borrible. I was bloated from head to foot, it was almost impossible to breathe, and I could not sleep. In several places on my body the skin burst open, so great was the pressure from within. The agony I endured was indescribable. Then the doctor told me my case was hopeless, that I had neight's disease in its worst form, and that I had only a few days to live."

"Fortunstely I had a friend who necompanied me and would not see me die without a struggle. He did not urre, he insisted on my making one more effort, and I did so. I noticed an improvement at once; in four days the swelling greatly decreased and the pain wholly ceased. I continued to improve and am a well man to-day, and owe my life to the marvellous effects of that wonderful preparation—Hunt's Remedy. I believe this is the greatest medicline that was one settled sym meet him, nor did another word reply to his repeated requests that the picket should advise him as to what course he The party on the hand-car cowered under torrents of falling water, and hoped that there might be a cessation the lightning flashes, so that any hidden riflemen would be less able to "I give it up," said the voice of the sergeant at last. over my resurrection?

Such is the account of probably as narrow an escape from death as was ever known. The first symptoms which Mr. Smith felt were such as many others feel but do not consider worth noticing. It is plain, however, that the early indications of a 4mperous disease cannot be trifled with, but must be met promptly, and by such a remedy as has been proven to be indeed a friend in time of need.
